

Terra Marique

Opened its doors on 25th October 2019 . The name is from the latin and it means “by land and sea”.

This name has been chosen to reflect the menu based on “land” and “sea” dishes.

It is not the classic italian place serving pizza and pasta, but the idea is to introduce to Edinburgh other traditional Italian dishes.

The cuisine is much more sophisticated and all the food on the menu is homemade (from the bread, to the pasta, right through to the ice cream. Some of the products come straight from Italy, but most of them are local.

The menu is seasonal, so it will change 4 times a year. This is to guarantee the freshness of the products in every single dish.

The owners Ilaria Torre originally from Puglia, and Fabrizio Babbucci from Tuscany, decided to take this adventure because, after 10 years in Edinburgh and our whole lives in the industry, they thought was the right time to step up!

They have been worked in many places in the city to have knowledge of what people like and how propose their idea.

The chef, Maddalena Fozzi, originally from Sardinia.

She always worked in the industry as well. She left her home town very young and done her experience all over Italy, before to come to Scotland 5 years ago.

After the 15 years in Italya and the last 5 in Scotland, she had all the knowledge to creat her own menu.
